

A message from Chair of Trustees, Jane McCloskey

Thank you for your interest in the role of Artistic Director. This is an exciting time for NDCWales and for me personally, as the Board prepares to appoint an Artistic Director who will be attracted by the chance to work in Wales and to be inspired by contemporary Wales and its culture.

For us – as for all those in dance and the wider cultural sector – this is a moment of dynamic and urgent change. It is a moment for someone to join us who can seize the opportunity to reimagine what a contemporary dance company might be, whilst remaining true to our mission and values and inspire the people of Wales and the world with great dance. We are open to radical ideas and new ways of operating – with our audiences and participants at the heart of our thinking. We want to find new ways of working to reach new and different people – to achieve our mission ‘to make great dance with and for all kinds of people in all kinds of places.’

You will be an inspirational and experienced leader with a bold, distinctive artistic vision and an unquenchable passion for dance. Reporting to and working closely with the Chief Executive, you will co-create our strategic plan and devise and commission the Company’s adventurous artistic programme with learning and participation at the core plus a bold new digital programme. We’re open to new approaches and ideas to match our desire for innovation and express our values.

It’s important that you are an experienced dance curator, audience-focussed and widely respected by established and emerging artists and by industry colleagues. Comfortable in the studio and the office, you will have a forward-looking and resilient approach, tapped into what is happening now. If you are a choreographer, you will be willing to forgo creating work with NDCWales for the first two years to give the Company the full energy and breadth of your vision.

We’re looking for someone with deep knowledge of contemporary dance, proven ability to support and nurture artistic collaborations who is in touch with promoters and programmers relevant to NDCWales. You will be deeply committed to finding more ways in which NDCWales can connect with the public to meet its social justice priorities and to increase and diversify who sees and takes part in our work.

The Board of trustees – of which I became Chair in September 2017 – is a vibrant, diverse, knowledgeable and dedicated group with a shared love of contemporary dance and an agenda to support the growth and success of NDCWales. Our specialisms include dance, participation, business, legal and financial, digital, and management.

Our Chief Executive, Paul Kaynes, says:

‘We’re ready for change and reinvention to meet the needs and aspirations of the people of Wales, with a relentless focus on our audiences and participants. We have the potential to create increased impact through our work, and I’m looking forward to getting started on that task with our new Artistic Director. We will spend time understanding each other’s perspectives and ideas, tapping into our mutual energy and seeking insight into how we can engage audiences and support each other’s work. Together we will listen to people both within and outside the Company, to understand what change is needed to achieve our priority of social justice for future generations. That won’t be simple or quick – it will take patience and sensitivity, but it’s a programme of change and development that we are up for.’

Our vision is a Wales where dance is part of everyone's life, and that we are celebrated as a nation passionate about dance and dancing.

Our mission is to make great dance with and for all kinds of people in all kinds of places.

As a repertory dance company, we create a mix of work by a range of choreographers to reflect different perspectives of Wales and the world. By making dance for stages large and small, outdoors, in unusual spaces, online, and through learning and participation experiences, we can remain flexible and fleet of foot.

Central to our mission is that our programmes resonate with the diverse communities of Wales and are representative of them. Working together, we aim to inspire our partners across the nation with our passion for dance, and so increase and diversify our audiences. We believe dance can help Wales and its communities flourish. By putting audiences and participants at the heart of our work we ensure that NDCWales is responding to community aspiration, and harnessing creativity in the way we plan, devise and deliver what we do.

We can help Wales to re-imagine itself, enabling the nation to recognise the parts of itself that are not often seen. Our international work reflects the idea that the world is already in Wales – not least through our colonial history – so our international working relates as much to our environment as it does to others'.

Our priorities are:

- Social justice for the benefit of future generations
- Acting as a 'Laboratori' for innovation
- Being financially robust and organisationally resilient.

Our values are to be:

Connected – to the dance community, to other cultural organisations, to a diverse range of partners beyond the cultural sector, and to communities of place and interest

Confident – as champions for dance, leading research, creation and engagement, presenting work in different settings from stages to laboratories, from digital platforms to care homes

Curious – to learn, to innovate, to test and choreograph new arrangements of people and ideas, embracing diversity as a catalyst for learning

Generous – to share our passion, our knowledge and our resources with artists, participants, collaborators and audiences.

Equality

NDCWales makes innovative dance with and for all kinds of people, and presents its work in different formats and contexts across Wales and around the world. We believe diversity should be fully embedded into organisational culture and values, and we are seeking a shift in the diversity of the company and its work. We are passionate and committed to diversifying the organisation and the world of dance, but to achieve this we need to better understand the barriers to people taking part in our work. To that end we are talking with and listening to people from a range of communities, to bring understanding and insight, and to foster change.

Details of the action we are taking can be found in our Strategic Equality Plan 2020

A National Company

Wales is a place of rare beauty with the oldest language in Europe and a tradition of literature and poetry to rival any in the world. Cardiff is gaining a national and international reputation as a fulcrum of creativity through the arts and media. The City itself is a dynamic, youthful and optimistic capital well connected to the rest of the UK and to Europe.

NDCWales is one of the national arts companies of Wales, alongside National Theatre Wales, Theatr Genedlaethol Cymru (the Welsh language national theatre), BBC National Orchestra of Wales and Welsh National Opera amongst others. We reach and inspire audiences and participants across Wales, the wider

UK and around the world creating demonstrable impact with work of the highest quality.

Based at the Dance House in Cardiff's Millennium Centre at the heart of a vibrant nation, we are proud of our status as a national company. Wales is undergoing a dynamic renaissance, and key to this is a country-wide network of artists, venues, producers and festivals. NDCWales has played a tangible part in this growth, creating distinctive work, by Wales for Wales, celebrating the cultural resonance of this country by championing the work of Welsh artists. The Company is making a significant contribution to the profile and awareness of contemporary Welsh culture across the UK and internationally.

Within the Company there are eight exceptional dancers including a Learning Lead Dancer, two work-based learners and a highly talented creative and business team. The Company is led by Chief Executive Paul Kaynes who has been with NDCWales for over 5 years, and a senior leadership team of four (see staff structure on the last page).

We recognise the value of learning and participation in developing talent, widening dance engagement and developing audiences not only for us but for other dance artists' work - this activity is at the heart of what we do. With our partners we explore the positive links between dance and health and run classes for over 8000 people of all ages and abilities each year.

Diversifying the people we work with as artists, staff, audiences and participants is vital. We have ambitious targets to build on work which has resulted in a more diverse Board, workforce and dancers. 14% of our Board and workforce is from a Black and Minority Ethnic background, 17% is Deaf or disabled, with 30% identifying as LGBTQ+. We recognise there's much more to be done to achieve equity and this is a key aim for the Board and leadership team.

Dance in Wales

The dance sector in Wales includes companies and individual artists creating work and delivering community-based activity. The sector is not large however; it is increasingly diverse. There are a number of organisations which are part of the Arts Council's 'Arts Portfolio Wales'. Besides NDCWales, members include Ballet Cymru and Jukebox Collective, as well as Migrations, a contemporary arts organisation based in North Wales commissioning dance work. There is a strong and long-established network of community dance agencies across the nation – Rubicon in the South East, Impelo covering Powys, Dawns i Bawb in North West Wales and North East Wales Dance (NEW Dance), and a growing recognition of the role dance can play in the health sector. In addition, there is a network of independent dance artists, who create and tour work when lottery awards allow. There is a higher education dance course at University of Wales Trinity St. David's in Carmarthen while the course at the University of South Wales is set to close. There are a number of mid-scale and some small-scale venues who regularly programme dance. Cardiff Dance Festival, an international biennial event, uses the Dance House as one of its regular venues.

Recent achievements

Over recent years NDCWales has created more diverse work, significantly increased audience and participant numbers, increased levels of activity and presented high quality work in Wales and internationally. This includes large-scale outdoor productions, digital commissions, co-productions, a small-scale venue tour in Wales and expanding touring to mid-scale venues. As a result, the Company has grown in confidence and profile and has built strong relationships, especially in Wales with artists and practitioners who we work with as artistic collaborators, workshop partners and commissioned artists.

During the Covid-19 crisis, we have maintained links with our audiences and artists in Wales through creating original work online, making participatory activity available for a wide range of participants, and streaming performances. This has built on work already underway exploring new digital means of creating and sharing dance, through Mixed and Augmented Reality. This is the focus of an extended R&D process and is intended to create a new element for our programme.

In recent years we have commissioned Alexandra Waierstall, Anthony Matsena, Marcos Morau, Fernando Melo and former Artistic Directors Caroline Finn and Fearghus Ó Conchúir, to create live works with the Company. We also make work with the Young Associates, our Youth company aged 14-19 who attend weekly professional level contemporary training, and our Dance for Parkinson's dancers, the most recent being Reflections, created by Fearghus and inspired by Afterimage by Fernando Melo.

We have a growing role in the wider dance sector in Wales through projects such as Laboratori which brings together established and emerging independent choreographers and NDCWales dancers to work with experienced mentors, creating a space for those involved in creating and programming dance in Wales to collaborate to create change. We have recently commissioned 8 Wales-based artists to work with poets to create Plethu/Weave, a series of short dance and poetry films.

NDCWales' international work contributes to Wales' reputation overseas: in 2019/20 we gave 20 performances in Japan (alongside the Rugby World Cup), Hong Kong, Spain, Germany and Austria. Supported by Wales Arts International the Company is developing new international partnerships and tours. For instance, we are planning a collaboration with the Korean National Contemporary Dance Company (KNCDC) in 2021/22 when a Wales-based choreographer will create work with KNCDC, and a Korean choreographer will create work with NDCWales.

The Company

NDCWales was founded as 'Diversions' in 1983 and grew in size and stature. In 2004 the Company moved to a purpose-built home, the Dance House, as part of the new Wales Millennium Centre (WMC) and in 2009 the Company became National Dance Company Wales, reflecting its status and role in leading and championing dance for Wales.

NDCWales maintains a permanent company of eight full-time dancers and two work-based learners who perform at base and at other venues in Wales, the wider UK and internationally.

Having stepped down from her role as Artistic Director of the Company in 2017, Caroline Finn maintains a close relationship with NDCWales which tours work she made during her time as Artistic Director. Caroline will make a new work for the Company's Spring Tour in 2021. Associate Artists Antony Matsena and Matteo Marfoglio help the Company to express, extend and diversify its vision through longer-term relationships that inform different aspects of our work. Selected by the Artistic Director, for periods of at least two years,

Associate Artists may work with NDCWales on creating pieces for its professional repertoire, the Young Associates and other programmes and may contribute to the Company's learning and participation activity.

We run a growing programme of dance participation, especially in Wales for young and old, for those who have never tried dance before, for dancers who want to develop their skills and artistry, and for people for whom dance is a therapeutic activity because of a condition or illness. While Company dancers are involved in some of these wide-ranging projects, the majority are delivered by our Dance Ambassadors, a network of 24 freelance dance artists across Wales and England, who are steeped in our repertoire and work in their local communities with young people and adults. Many of these Dance Ambassadors are attached to one of our eight Priority Venues which are primarily in Wales.

We have our own rehearsal studio plus a 102-seat performance space, offices and production facilities at the Dance House. In addition to its use by NCDWales, we hire the performance space to local and UK dance training companies, independent dance artists mainly from Wales, and artists working in other disciplines. There is scope, funding permitting, to develop a curated public dance programme in the performance space.

We create performances for all kinds of places – from Welsh theatres large and small to the Maes at the Eisteddfod, from European and International stages to online and screen projects, and from heritage settings to our home at the Wales Millennium Centre.

Governance and Finance

NDCWales is a registered charity with trustees who also act as directors of the Company: here is a link to Board of Trustees, October 2020. The Board is led by Chair Jane McCloskey, broadcaster and academic, with a strong background in creative industries development. Trustees are recruited through advertisement and interview.

We aim to create a programme that is artistically adventurous and ambitious whilst maintaining a financially robust position. Our work is funded through grant income from Arts Council Wales (the Company's major funder - £843,000 in 20/21), box office income, space hire and fundraising from charitable trusts, businesses and individual donors.

The Board is establishing a new sub-committee, the Artistic Advisory Group, made up of trustees, staff and external representatives to support the Artistic Director in curation and decision-making - the Group will not have decision making powers. The Artistic Director will help to shape and decide the remit of this group

Audiences and Participants

The Company gave 56 performances in 2019/20 (57 in 2018/19). Of these 19 were international and 33 in Wales, with the remainder in the rest of the UK. During 2019/20 NDCWales reached:

- 28,143 live audiences and participants.
- 2,700 young people (7-18) engaged through schools and workshop activity.
- 556 people engaged with NDCWales and English National Ballet's Dance for Parkinson's.
- 1,300 adults took part in an evening classes at the Dance House.

In the last 6 months there were 280,000 views of video content on social media and YouTube.

NDCWales Audience Research of live audiences 2018-2020

Live audiences

- Our audiences are not frequent attenders of dance, attending once every 2 years.
- The main reasons audiences want to see NDCWales live is to be stimulated, entertained and inspired, and to spend time with loved ones.

Digital audiences

- NDCWales digital audiences are much younger than Live Audiences.

- 17% identified as d/Deaf or disabled, or with long-term health conditions.
- 53% of online audiences are existing high frequency live attenders. 13% are low frequency NDCWales live attenders, and 10% are non-NDCWales live attenders.

In September 2020 we commissioned qualitative research with existing and potential audiences, to test for links between the digital work that has been created and shared, and live performance attendance.

We found that online audiences were more open to trying new things and keen to deepen their knowledge about the creation of NDCWales' work. They would go and see NDCWales live in the future.

Core audiences and non-attenders will watch online if they have to, but they crave being in the space with audiences and being part of a live atmosphere. They are screen-time fatigued. They would prefer to watch shorter films online.

'I thought you responded really rapidly and positively to providing quality digital content and really appreciated the 'Watch Together' sessions with live Q&As from company members. I never get around to asking questions at Q&As after live performances, but I felt somehow more compelled to connect with people because they were effectively in my home. Anyway, thank you!'

The Role

The Artistic Director provides artistic leadership for the Company, curating inspirational programmes of work and enthusing company members, audiences and participants with the transformational power of dance. The Artistic Director is appointed by the Board and reports to the Chief Executive.

NDCWales is looking for a creative artistic leader who has a strong, distinctive vision for the future of this repertory contemporary dance company. Together with the Chief Executive and the Senior Leadership Team they will lead the strategic thinking and planning for the Company including the business plan. As an arts and cultural sector leader, the Artistic Director will spend around half their time out and about in Wales engaging with artists and colleague organisations, building partnerships, undertaking advocacy work, fundraising and viewing learning and participation activity and performances.

We welcome applications from dance leaders. You might be a choreographer, curator of dance, creative producer, programmer or from another creative background in dance. It is likely you will have led an established dance company or organisation or worked in one at a senior level. You will have a track record as a programmer and the ability to support and nurture artistic collaborations. You will be a leader with an eye for spotting talent and an artistic vision that you can explain and excite others with. You will be comfortable as an advocate and a leading representative and voice of Dance in the national discourse about the arts and their potential to effect transformational change.

A collaborative leadership style and the ability to engage with NDCWales' role as a national company of Wales are essential, as is a passion to inspire audiences and dance participants with work that is entertaining, intriguing and of excellent quality. As comfortable working in an office environment as a studio, the Artistic Director will be required to communicate and collaborate with the Board and team members across all departments.

The Artistic Director has line management responsibility for the Learning and Participation Producer and the two Rehearsal Directors who line-manage the Company dancers. They will work closely with senior post holders in Development, Producing and Communications. The Artistic Director will attend and contribute to board meetings and have a close working relationship with the Board and especially the Artistic Advisory Group.

We aim to make this appointment by the end of January 2021 with a view to the new Artistic Director starting by Summer 2021 and curating programmes from 2022.

Terms and conditions

This is envisaged as a full-time role; however, we are open to job share proposals.

Salary: £50,000 - £55,000 dependent on experience

Pension: NDCWales contributes up to 5% of salary to a pension with Royal London, dependent on employee's matching contribution

Contract: Permanent full-time employment contract

Hours: Normal hours will be 37.5 hours per week, worked flexibly

Place of work: Dance House Cardiff

Travel Regular national and international travel and touring with the company

Holidays: 28 days per year plus 8 public holidays (3 of these days must be taken between Christmas and New Year)

Probation 6 months

Notice Period 3 months

It is essential that the post-holder lives locally. NDCWales will contribute towards relocation to within 20 miles of Cardiff.

Any offer of employment will be subject to the receipt of:

- References that are satisfactory to the trustees
- Evidence of right to work in the UK as defined by the Home Office

- Disclosure Barring Service certificate

Job specification

The purpose of the post is to provide artistic leadership for NDCWales, including:

- Planning, commissioning and curating the artistic programme across live, learning and participation and digital activity.
- Advocating and promoting the vision, mission and values of the Company in all matters.
- Ensuring diversity and inclusion are integral to the Company, through works: commissioned, talent development, participation work and other creative projects.
- Forging and maintaining relationships and collaborations that develop the Company's artistic programme and enhance its reputation and profile.
- Acting as an ambassador for the company, particularly for fundraising purposes and for the wider dance sector in Wales.

Responsibilities

- Developing and articulating an inspirational artistic policy and working in collaboration with the Board and Chief Executive to anchor this within a strong strategy for the Company's future.
- Leading the curation and delivery of programmes of work for touring on all scales and settings including digital, at the Dance House and in communities and internationally.
- Building relationships with choreographers, creatives and partners and commissioning new live and digital dance work aligned with the vision.
- Supporting guest choreographers to create their best work.
- Developing the performance standards of the Company including the fitness and welfare of the dancers, supported by the Rehearsal Directors.

- Providing leadership for the staff and dancers to develop and deliver our learning and participation programme to reach the widest possible range of people, especially in Wales.
- Creating and implementing artistic plans within the available resources and supporting the Production team to ensure productions are ambitious while managing artistic expectations where necessary.
- Developing artistic partnerships, taking full account of Wales' network of arts organisations and artists, and beyond, including activities such as touring and broadcasting.
- Working with the Chief Executive and the Communications Director, to develop audience development objectives and to strengthen links between programming and diversifying audiences.

Leadership and Management (20%*)

- Providing leadership for the dance sector in Wales, devising programmes to develop knowledge and skills and partnerships between the Company and local artists, fostering creative partnerships and seeking out diverse talent.
- Acting as an advocate for dance in Wales.
- Contributing to the overall strategic thinking and direction of the organisation, ensuring the artistic programme fully reflects the Company's vision and resources.
- Inspiring and motivating staff across the organisation to realise the vision.
- Leading the approach to skills and talent development, particularly for dancers, dance students and practitioners.
- Attending and contributing to discussions about all areas of operation at board meetings and working closely with the Artistic Advisory Group.

- Co-creating and delivering the business plan and contributing to its development and renewal.
- Contributing to funding applications and bids.
- Leading the evaluation of artistic activities and creating a culture of learning and improvement.
- Keeping informed of current practice in international and UK dance, advising the Board and colleagues, and contributing to Welsh and UK networks and developments.
- Inputting to the effective scheduling of Company activities.
- Collaborating with Higher Education institutions to develop opportunities for dance students.

Finance (10%*)

- Working closely with the Chief Executive, Finance Manager and Operations Director and Tour and Projects Producer (and others) to develop and manage programming budgets.

HR Management (10%*)

- Line managing the Rehearsal Directors and Learning and Participation Producer taking responsibility for performance and professional development.
- Working closely with the Rehearsal Directors to set the culture and tone of work amongst Company dancers, championing ways of working which actively promote the Company's values.
- Contributing to the health and wellness strategy for the dancers.
- Supporting and encouraging the professional development of Company staff.

- Participating in recruitment, performance management, discipline and grievance, in line with policies.

General duties (10%*)

- Acting as a role model for all employees in terms of professional conduct, standards and policies.
- Acting as a spokesperson for the Company at fundraising events, in general advocacy and internally.
- Deputising for the Chief Executive as required.
- Providing timely reports and information for the Board.
- Undertaking other duties reasonably expected by the Chief Executive or Board.

This job description and percentages are a guide to the nature of the work required of the Artistic Director. This is not wholly comprehensive or restrictive and may be reviewed with the post-holder, from time-to-time.

*These percentages are given as an approximate guide to the expected proportion of time spent on each area.
